The Department of Culture
announces the launch of the book

SHOW AND TELL MARRIAGES LIVING IN HELL!

by Venoria Todman

26th March, 2025
Village Cay, Marina
5:30 p.m.

Author Mrs. Venoria Todman will launch her new book, "Show and Tell Marriages, Living in Hell", next week.

Mrs. Todman said the book offers an honest exploration of the emotional and psychological complexities of modern marriages. "The book delves into the struggles many couples face, providing a candid and insightful look at relationships that are often challenging to navigate," she said, Deputy Director of the Virgin Islands Department of Culture Ms. Anne Lennard said the department remains committed to assisting, where possible, with the promotion of the works of our local authors.

"Mrs. Venoria Todman's latest release promises to be a great read," Ms Lennard said, adding, "The department also launched the author's first book, 'Who Cheats More Than a Politician,' in 2015. We congratulate Mrs. Todman on the release of her newest work and encourage the community to come out and support the launch on Wednesday, March 26, at Village Cay Marina, starting at 5:30 p.m.

Ms Lennard said as part of the department's ongoing support for local authors, this event provides the community with an opportunity to engage with Ms. Todman and learn more about the themes and inspiration behind her work. Attendees will also have the chance to meet the author and gain deeper insights into the book.

The Deputy Director said her department continues to be a strong advocate for local talent and invites everyone to join the launch, discover this new literary work, and participate in an important cultural event.

The Department of Culture is dedicated to preserving and promoting the cultural heritage of the Virgin Islands through various programmes and initiatives. By supporting local authors and artists, the department plays a crucial role in fostering the growth and recognition of Virgin Islands' creative works, both locally and internationally.
